Mello backs off on bill to dissolve MPWMD

Plan scuttled for successor agency, but shell of SB 1951 remains intact would have been retained, replaced or fired.

By PAUL WOLF

WITH TENUOUS support for his plan to dissolve the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District, State Sen. Henry Mello, D-Watsonville, has abandoned his controversial proposal to create a "successor agency."

But the shell of his Senate Bill 1951 remains intact, as Mello supports a provision that would allow water projects to be implemented without a vote of the people, according to Mello's Administrative Assistant Pat Allen.

On Wednesday, Mello's office distributed a statement announcing amendments that would cut out the heart of SB 1951. The "successor agency" would have replaced the five elected directors with a board consisting of the six Peninsula mayors and two Monterey county supervisors, or their appointed representatives.

It was not established what the new agency would have been called or how much of the MPWMD professional staff

Back to business

To MPWMD staff and board members, Mello's decision means the district will be around to seek solutions to the Peninsula's water problems.

"We have spent so much of our time trying to put out this brush fire," said Director Jim Hughes on Wednesday. "It will be nice for us to do what we've been elected to do — solve our water problems."

The bill was born out of the belief of many, including Mello, that the MPWMD has failed over its 18-year history to secure a major new source of water.

Fort Ord reuse plan offers little protection for Hwy 1

■ Carmel, Monterey, PG officials express concerns about lack of regional control.

By PAUL WOLF

THE FORT Ord reuse plan contains no detailed rules for development along Highway 1, leaving Marina and Seaside to decide how they want their buildings to look once they have annexed former Army property.

So say Carmel, Monterey and Pacific Grove officials, who recognize their limits in checking development of residential, commercial and office buildings slated for the highway corridor.

Yet city officials in the slower-growing areas of the Peninsula expressed serious concerns about what could happen to the Peninsula's northern entrance.

"The development along the highway is of great concern to me," said Carmel Councilwoman Barbara Livingston, who serves as an alternative on the Fort Ord Reuse Authority (FORA). "This is the gateway to the Monterey Peninsula, and anything that is visible from the freeway should be controlled regionally."

But that may not happen, according to many sources.

The plan contains many general guidelines regarding scale, type and character of development on the east side of Highway 1. Unknown at present is whether the specifics of development will be fleshed out before the plan is finalized in July, or whether FORA will be able to revisit design standards in a separate document.

"These kinds of (regulations) haven't been addressed in the plan, and I am not sure if they will be addressed," said Bill Fell, Monterey planning services manager, who often represents Monterey City Manager Fred Meurer on FORA.

Carmel, Monterey and Pacific Grove officials understand the concept of "home rule" for Marina and Seaside. Yet they suggest that the more specific the guidelines, the better for the entire Peninsula.

The design "principles" contained in the reuse plan, argues Carmel City Administrator Jere Kersnar, "don't go as far as I think they need to go. Some of the specific design standards would have to be discussed in amendments, appendixes and so on."

Monterey Councilman Dave Potter, who serves on FORA in transportation planning, said even those people most concerned about "inappropriate development" realize that Marina and Seaside may be allowed to call their own shots.

At his swearing-in ceremony Tuesday afternoon, new Carmel Councilman Marshall Hydorn vowed to vote his 'conscience' and said he will be an 'independent' voice.

As new council sworn in, Hydorn vows he'll be an 'independent' voice

By SUSAN BECK
and PAUL WOLF

HOPING TO move beyond the strife of a long political season, newly elected councilman Marshall Hydorn stressed that his decision-making will not be tied to any special-interest groups.

"I'm an independent," said the retired airline pilot and owner of Sea View Inn, who replaced incumbent Phil Coniglio, councilman since 1992, on April 9.

Hydorn's base of support came from the Carmel Residents Association, which also endorsed the re-election of Mayor Ken White and Councilwoman Barbara Livingston.

"I'll vote my conscience," Hydorn said at a swearing-in ceremony at Carmel City Hall Tuesday afternoon.

"I'm looking forward to working with the council, and I think we can reach consensus on most issues," he added. "I'll do my best to bring that about."

The mood was exuberant as White was sworn in for his third two-year term and Livingston to a second four-year term.

Defeating challenger Frank Perry by a wide majority, White sought to dispel "rampant rumors" that Hydorn's victory clinches a three-person council majority favoring residential interests over those of business.

"I submit there are going to be some surprises," White said. "The council will vote as individuals, not as representatives of special-interest groups. My goal is to work for the community as a team."

Livingston, who often was a lone voice on many issues, called her re-election a "tremendous vote of confidence." Looking forward to working with a compatible council, she said, "There are exciting times ahead."

Youth Center big help, but local kids struggle to fit in Bay School one shining example where kids, parents interact

By KENDALL KLYM

At 17, Jason Remyne likes to hang out with friends after school.

Because the options for youths in Carmel are limited, he goes to the Carmel Youth Center, the only designated place in the city where he can casually congregate with friends.

"My stepdad works nights, so we don't do much together as a family," he said one recent afternoon while leaning on the edge of the fast food counter at the center.

His friend Jake Fair, also 17, said, "I think this place makes things better. It gives you a place to hang out. I think a lot of kids don't have anybody at home to be with."

Remyne and Fair are two of the many young people living in a town where youth are segregated from adults — a stereotypical American community where young people do their thing and adults do theirs.

As the nation tries to reclaim its youth from the front lines of gang warfare and the prisons of drug addiction, where does Carmel fit into the picture? Since we don't have gangs, and the streets of Carmel are safe from pan-handling punks, does that mean everything is fine with our youth?

According to teen-agers, the city lacks an environment that caters to youth. According to adults, Carmel is better than numerous other American cities, but youth and their parents have a long way to go before functional relationships are achieved here and throughout the nation.

Someone to talk to Fair said most of his friends and acquaintances at school come from broken homes — a tough situation for young people to endure.

"Not many kids live with both parents," he offered. Youth Center Director Pat Lenz said young people need to interact with adults so they can deal with such problems and develop into respectable, law-abiding citizens.

"Kids come in here because they want someone to talk to," he said. "Sixty percent of my job is counseling with kids."

Lenz said he enjoys the rewards of spending time with youth and acting as a father figure, but some parents don't seem to understand the importance of such interaction.

"Parents want a babysitter service," he said. "Parents are looking for a safe place to drop their kids off. I'm stuck between a rock and a hard place."

Criticism of adults

One of the main criticisms of parents and adults in Carmel and in communities throughout the country is that they do things for their children, not with them.

"In America, we take (kids) to an event and leave them there," a spectator said at the workshop titled "The Good City for Children and Youth," a segment of the Making Cities Livable conference held recently at La Playa Hotel.

The workshop, led by urban scholar Henry Lennard, focused on developing relationships between children and adults in social and physical environments.

"When do children learn about good societal values?"

Bay School is one place where parents and children have perfected the art of interaction. Here, Sallyann Forzani and daughter Naomi play in the sand, while the littlest Forzani, Ellie, is more than content to be along for the ride.

he asked. "A child doesn't learn this in cyberspace."

Lennard's wife, Suzanne Crowhurst Lennard, said, "Many children are interacting only with television."

After watching a slide presentation of a family festival in Ravensburg, Germany, another spectator remarked, "In Germany, families do things with their children, not for them."

Stacy Ciulik, a woman who recently returned to Carmel with her family after living in Switzerland, said the separateness of American families may be a result of our nation's pioneering spirit.

"Over there, (in Switzerland and throughout Europe), people are much more group-oriented," she said. "Everyone here is still being a great pioneer."

Ciulik said she enjoyed attending five-hour family meals in Switzerland where children wouldn't even think of asking to be excused.

"Then we would have Sunday outings where everyone would go on a walk," she said.

Meanwhile, in Carmel, 18-year-old Maryn SanFilippo likes to hang out with her friends who spend their Sunday afternoons venturing out to sea to ride an uncharted wave.

"In our age group around here, kids surf or Rollerblade," she said. "This is not stuff parents really do with kids."

Critics at the workshop said the schism between adults and youth starts at a very young age when parents send their children to day care, and, when they get older, to preschool, sports practice and eventually to college.

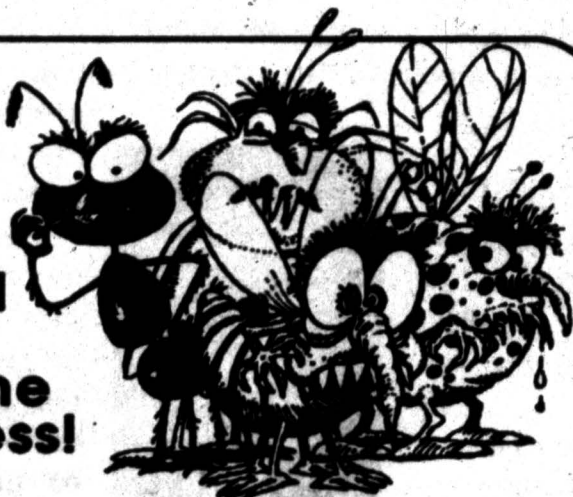

In Carmel, however, one group of parents has broken the vicious cycle of separation.

At the little red school house known as Bay School, parents don't get away with leaving their children.

"Parents are required to work one day (each week per attending child) as a teacher's aide," said Lore Riley, a parent and the school's PTA president. "Parents are also required to attend Monday night meetings three times a month where we talk about parenting, education, curriculum. Parents participating is exactly what the school is founded on."

What's all this nonsense about grumpy old men?

It was a letter from one Donald Patterson of Monterey, which said in part:

"I have been a sometimes reader of your columns for several years now, and while I've found them somewhat interesting from a clinical standpoint, I've always wondered just what is the matter with you."

"THEN two days ago, I ran across the enclosed Associated Press story and it all becomes clear now!"

"I guess there's nothing they can do, eh?"

The AP story he enclosed was about a psychologist at the University of Pennsylvania, Ruben C. Gur, who said men lose brain tissue at three times the rate of women as they age, turning them into "grumpy old men."

The tissue loss, he says, curbs their memories, their concentration and reasoning powers, which makes them grumpy about almost everything.

NOW just a darn minute, Patterson, I think the entire AP story was a put-on that came a few days too late for April Fool's Day!

I mean, are we really going to believe there's a guy named Gur who is an authority on grumpy old men? They may as well have spelled it g-u-r-u-m-p-y old men!

BUT getting back to what Patterson seems to infer, he's dead wrong if he thinks this column is getting grumpier and grumpier. It isn't. We're as kindly and patient and soft-spoken as ever.

Oh sure, one or two things mildly bother us: DRIVERS who sit there day-dreaming long after the light turns green (I could strangle 'em); TV stations that jack up the volume twice as loud on commercials as on everything else (a pox on 'em); CEOs who "downsize" 40,000 employees onto the street but demand their own salaries be tripled (they should be publicly flogged).

Men who don't remove their hats or caps indoors, especially in restaurants (they should have them lit on fire); bores who talk when it's my turn.

ANONYMOUS letters (Lilith treats them as gospel and builds shallow editorials around them, but to me the authors are simply chicken-bleep and should be totally ignored); tailors, chefs, contractors, etc., who can't seem to get it through their thick skulls what I want.

OH there are other things, too — many, many, many others — but does that indicate a grumpy old man?

Of course not. It only indicates a caring fellow who generously wishes to help other people improve. I feel it's my duty.

BUT as for Patterson, I've canceled his subscription.

Educator's 2 'sides' touched many

By PAUL WOLF

WHETHER SERIOUS or whimsical, Rosemary Montgomery touched those around her.

The former Carmel educator, who died at the age of 57 on April 8 after a long battle with cancer, had contrasting but equally vital aspects to her personality, say her colleagues.

First, there is the serious image — that of a bustling elementary school principal and administrator whose service to the Carmel Unified School District from 1983 to 1995 was characterized by conscientiousness and caring.

"She was the ultimate professional," said Barbara Beck, coordinator of Carmel Unified School District's child development program.

Likewise, Vance Baldwin, former CUSD superintendent who worked alongside Mrs.

Montgomery until her illness prompted her retirement as assistant superintendent, said, "She was particularly interested in children who had trouble learning or who had special needs. She had empathy for all the children. I always valued her guidance and strong convictions."

In her nine years as CUSD curriculum director and assistant superintendent, Mrs. Montgomery advanced math, social science, reading and science programs and facilitated the mentor teacher program, in which key instructors help other teachers develop approaches.

Whimsical image

Then there is the whimsical image of Mrs. Montgomery — that perfectly embodied in her alter ego, Tondelayo Rifkin. Colleagues say she had an unbeatable flair for playing this fictional character, who wore unmatched, tacky garments, excess lipstick, fishnet stockings, whimsical hats and other extravagances and told great tales.

"This was her imaginary person who loved life and parties and enjoyed everyone in her own lighthearted way," said Sharron Douglas, principal of Carmel River School and a close personal friend.

Douglas was a River School teacher when Mrs. Montgomery was principal from 1983 to 1986. Once a year, the staff held an annual party, and the women dressed like Tondelayo.

"We would go through our closets and pull out clothes of the worst taste we could find," Douglas said. "It was her whimsical side that brought this about, her sheer abandon."

Beck agreed, saying, "She always brought out the humor in things. There was this part of her that was total fun."

As Baldwin described it, Mrs. Montgomery had "not only a wonderful optimism, but a talent for making people feel good."

As principal, her combination of seriousness and fun made her "an outstanding educator who also boosted the staff's morale," according to Douglas, who called Mrs. Montgomery her "mentor."

Her dual spirit also emerged in her poetry, an admired regular feature in the monthly CUSD newsletter.

After her retirement last year, Mrs. Montgomery, born in Sacramento in 1938, moved to Capitola with her husband, John.

FORT ORD: Officials say reuse plan offers little protection for Hwy 1

"I don't think it is like Monterey, Carmel or Pacific Grove to tell these jurisdictions what to do," he said. "FORA was not intended to be an architectural review committee."

FORA Executive Officer Les White said these concerned officials should recognize one fact: The master plan's principles have the force of law and cannot be contradicted by a city. In other words, even basic guidelines can prevent out-of-scale development.

Revisions

The new version of the plan, made available last week, reveals the continued scaling down of the total growth picture — a half century of gradual development. The final numbers, White said, won't change much, if at all:

- Some 17,600 additional housing units.
- Up to five new golf courses.
- Close to 2,000 hotel rooms.
- Two million square feet of retail space.
- Twelve million square feet of office and research space.

According to White, 70 percent of the former Army property will remain open space area under the jurisdiction of the U.S. Bureau of Land Management. That territory does not include campus lands or golf courses.

White noted, moreover, that within the next two decades, the 18,000 jobs lost by the closure of Fort Ord should have been restored.

No development is envisioned for the beachside of the highway, which will stay in the hands of the California Department of Parks and Recreation.

Quality of development

Meanwhile, as the quantity of development is becoming clear, quality is increasingly the issue.

"Carmel has concerns about design standards," said Carmel Mayor Ken White, re-elected last week to a third term. "Are we going to have five-story buildings along Highway 1? Will the buildings be chrome and glass, or of wood and in earth-tones? We are trying to keep a certain character for the Peninsula."

Likewise, Pacific Grove Mayor Sandy Koffman said, "Anything you build will be either beneficial or detrimental to the whole Peninsula. This is our entrance to the Peninsula."

Monterey Mayor Dan Albert said he is withholding judgment until the Monterey planning staff provides him with a complete report. If the city council has concerns, he noted, members will spell out their position to FORA.

Those concerned about the plan say much of the language in the plan is some-

Other clauses are rather general, as in the requirement to keep density "compatible with the low-density character of the greater peninsula."

Nowhere are there specific numbers for building heights, story limits or the square footage of buildings.

"There is descriptive language, but no numerical language," Meurer said.

Vocelka, Jordan: We'll do the right thing — but it's our job

By PAUL WOLF

WITH A mixture of defiance and sympathy with their neighbors, the mayors of Marina and Seaside said they will develop former Fort Ord land sensitively — but independently.

"The development that occurs along Highway 1 has to be left in the hands of Marina and Seaside," said Marina Mayor Jim Vocelka said. "But people should know that we care about the aesthetics of this area as much as anyone. We also want to attract tourism."

Likewise, Seaside Mayor Don Jordan said many peninsulans feel an "unnecessary nervousness" about the decisions Seaside will make. "We are a part of the Monterey Peninsula, too, and we want to enhance its beauty, not ruin it."

Still, Jordan expressed an unmistakable resolve: Seaside will make its own decisions.

"Every community has its own style," he said. "Carmel has little cottages, and Monterey has a more modern feel. Pacific Grove has its own style. We are developing a commercial base. Some of the people in the more affluent parts of the Peninsula have taken a position on what is good taste. We have good taste, too."

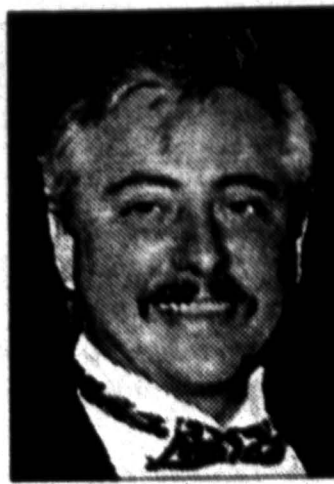

Vocelka said new developments that replace dilapidated, "old broken-down buildings" east of the highway will be an improvement.

Library talk set for April 29

HARRISON MEMORIAL Library will present a free lecture on local resident Noel Sullivan at 10:30 a.m. and again at 2:30 p.m. Monday, April 29 at the library's Park Branch, located on the corner of Sixth and Mission, Carmel.

Speaker Alice Mahoney will discuss this "Soul for All Seasons."

Defenders of the district, including district officials themselves, have argued that replacing the MPWMD with another governing body would not solve the region's water problems. Moreover, they point the finger at the electorate, not the water board, for rejecting a desalination plant in 1993 and a Carmel River dam in 1995.

Allen said what remains in SB 1951 would change the process by which new projects are approved, allowing major water supplies to be implemented so long as there is "no majority protest." A ballot would not be needed for dam or desalination projects, she explained.

Changing water politics

In his statement, Mello said he still intends to change water politics in such a way as "to encourage the MPWMD to regularly consult with the land use agencies and their respective elected bodies to better manage water resources."

On March 22, Mello held a public hearing at the Monterey City Council Chambers to gauge support for a successor agency. A vast majority of those who spoke at the hearing opposed the idea of dissolving the district and carrying over many of its duties to an appointed board.

"It was obvious there was no support for a successor agency," Allen said. "But the senator still believes certain things can be done to improve the process."

SPCA walking fund raiser brings in $36,000

LAST WEEKEND'S SPCA fundraiser "Wag 'n' Walk" brought out 369 walkers and their pets to Cannery Row and earned $36,000 for the SPCA of Monterey County.

Participants signed up for 2 or 4K walks after gathering fund-raising pledges. Benji Shake was honored for personally raising $740.

Money raised will support humane rescue, education, adoption programs and the SPCA's low-cost spay/neuter clinic.

■ In other SPCA news, volunteers are desperately needed to care for the hundreds of baby birds which will soon fill the Wildlife Center.

Volunteers will be asked to work one four-hour shift per week. More information: 422-4721 or 373-2631.

Oil collection center opens

AMONG THE newly established used oil collection centers is Rio Road Chevron, located at 3645 Rio Road in Carmel. Operating hours are 7:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. daily.

Second Voice — "Was it extra-terrestrial? Was it a cult kidnapping?" (Note that everything is past tense up to this point.)

First Voice again, forcefully — "It's the cars!"
Now back to Camille:

"WHAT'S the cars? It makes no sense. The first voice is babbling strangely about 'the cars' in present tense, completely ignoring the second voice's question about something that happened in the past!"

Duly noted, Camille. And if we HAD a Non Sequitur of the Month Award, that clinker would certainly be a hot candidate! But it would be a very large category.

HARDWARE FAMINE CONTINUED ... AP announced winners of all but two of its annual television news awards for California-Nevada last month — and the results were less than glorious for our area stations.

As reported here at the time, out of 23 first prizes awarded among smaller market stations, KSBW took only one, KCCN two and KCBA zero.

HOWEVER, KSBW and KCBA were finalists for the two awards that were NOT announced last month — best 30-minute newscast (KSBW) and best 60-minute news (KCBA).

Winners of these two categories were announced last Saturday at an AP banquet in Los Angeles — and, alas, the famine continued for the locals.

For the record, KTVN of Reno won for best 30-minute news, while KBAK of Bakersfield took top honors in 60-minute news.

But hey, as Greg Norman always says after the Masters — wait'll next year!

DISSA and DATA ... Begonia Gardens nursery, an institution in Carmel Valley for lo these many years, has apparently come a cropper.

We don't know for sure, but when it's been closed for more than four weeks in springtime (nurseries' hottest season), and there's nothing indicating when or if it will reopen, and nobody answers the phone — well, it's sometimes not a good sign.

THAT special Pulitzer Prize awarded to good old Herb Caen of the S.F. Chronicle last week was perfect justice!

Caen has been virtually the heart and soul of San Francisco almost from his very first column on July 5, 1938. Nobody in that great city is better known or better loved than Herb, and his popularity and influence are huge even down here on the Monterey Peninsula!

IN addition, he is one fine gentleman. Congratulations.

NOW THEN, fame is where you find it, so shake hands with Carmel Valley's Chad Hawker, 22, who is again (still?) the Champion Pancake-Eater of Chris Ulrich's and Craig Bell's First Awakenings restaurant in P.G.!

He scarfed down EIGHT of the eatery's platter-sized, half-inch thick pancakes to beat his old record by one!

HE'S got to be one mountainous porker to put all THAT away, right? Wrong. He's 5 feet 10 inches tall, 145 pounds! But his secret advantage, he says is the fact that he's an experienced, gung-ho TRIATHLON competitor.

"My metabolism burns up food quickly," he explains, "so my capacity is probably greater than most people's."

OK, so that takes care of Chad Hawker's 15 minutes of fame, at least until he wins the Olympics triathlon!

LASTLY ... This from Carmel's Rita Gonzalez to ponder this weekend:

Q. — How many surrealists does it take to change a light bulb?

A. — A white horse swimming in Jell-O.
(Good grief, is that another commercial for Seaside Auto Center?)

American Museum of Natural History:

125 years of Expedition and Discovery

In Retrospect

Eve Arnold

☐ Eve Arnold recounts in narrative form her life as a photographer. Accompanying the text is an overview of Ms. Arnold's career and pictures of American life from the '50s to date.

Political Death

Antonia Fraser

☐ Fans of Jemima Shore, investigator, have been waiting for this newest mystery. If you're looking for a good, well-written, deftly plotted mystery novel — Antonia Fraser's your author.

And our top recommendation for a children's book ...

Ruby the Copycat

Peggy Rathman

☐ Ruby is new in her class. How can she fit in? Maybe by copying Angela's hairbow, poem and weekend. Then again, maybe not. (Suggested ages: 5 to 10.)

City's top cop for '95 hailed as 'best that law enforcement has to offer'

By SUSAN BECK

CPL. JOHN Nyunt's strong work ethic and strength of character made him the natural choice for the 1995 Carmel Police Officer of the Year award.

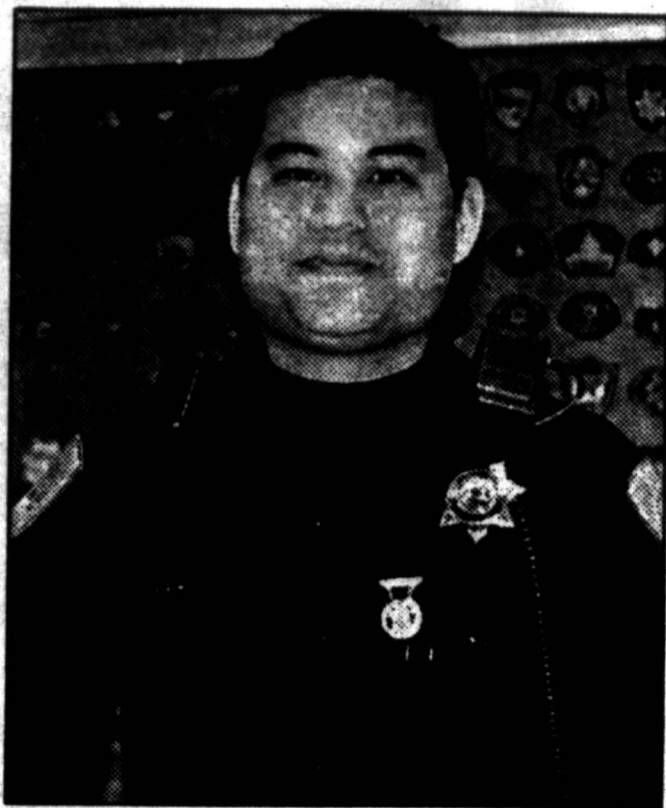

Since 1991, the 33-year-old has earned the respect of his peers, supervisors and community leaders for his day-to-day police work, commitment to his role as Crime Prevention Officer and his involvement in the capture of a member of the "I-5 Gang" three years ago.

But it was Nyunt's "wonderful work ethic and attitude" that prompted the department's management staff to honor him for this year's award, according to Don Fuselier, Carmel's police chief since 1994.

"John most typifies the kind of officer we want to represent this city," said Fuselier, who has been with the department for the past 24 years. "In my experience, he's one of the finest young officers I've ever worked with. He is the best that law enforcement has to offer."

Nyunt, who lives in Carmel with his wife, Elaine, and their two children, remarked that he was surprised by the award.

"I wasn't doing anything that the other officers weren't doing," he said with his ever-present smile. "Being a police officer is an opportunity to help people, especially in serious situations."

Nyunt serves as the department's bicycle control officer and works with the Special Response Team. In 1993, he rescued an elderly Carmel resident from a burning building.

"I've always been inspired to help people," said Nyunt, who comes from a law enforcement family. "I felt doing police work would come naturally."

If there is ever a task to be done, Fuselier noted the lifelong Monterey Peninsula resident is always willing to go the extra mile.

"If you need it done, John will do it," he said. "He's really a nice kid."

Before joining the police department, Nyunt attended Monterey Peninsula College and worked at a nursery.

He attributes much of his ability in overcoming hardships to John Posaw, owner of the local nursery, who taught him that adversity develops character. His good nature comes mostly from his father, whom he calls "very patient and soft spoken."

"Old Fashioned Care in a Modern World"

New S.F. aquarium to open Friday; officials here await impact, but don't expect big hit

By KENDALL KLYM

DESPITE ITS new Outer Bay exhibit, the Monterey Bay Aquarium must work harder at attracting tourists from the San Francisco Bay Area and beyond.

Underwater World, an aquarium at San Francisco's Pier 39, is set to open Friday, boasting a submerged tunnel enclosed on three sides by glass.

Accompanied by dramatic music and the sounds of sea creatures, spectators will be able to immerse themselves in the depths of marine biology without getting wet and view underwater life from the subaquatic angle of divers.

Although the Monterey Bay Aquarium features a new million-gallon tank with different viewing levels, a sea of anchovies swimming in a circle as well as several hands-on tide pools where people can directly interact with sea life, it does not offer the submersed experience of Underwater World.

"Tourists coming to San Francisco from other states could go to Pier 39 and potentially say, 'We've seen an aquarium,' and not come to Monterey," said Hank Armstrong, marketing and public relations manager of the Monterey Bay Aquarium. "We expect it will have some effect (on tourism in Monterey). We don't really know. We've never had this situation before."

Armstrong said the Monterey Bay Aquarium specializes in the marine wildlife of the Monterey Bay, something that Underwater World will not do.

As described in the San Francisco Examiner, Underwater World is a "$40 million tourist attraction." The Monterey Bay Aquarium, on the other hand, is a non-profit, self supporting aquarium.

"Hopefully, people will want to see both," Armstrong said.

According to statistics released by the Monterey Bay Aquarium, admissions from the S.F. Bay Area increased 13 percent in 1995. The aquarium welcomed 417,898 visitors from the San Francisco, Oakland and San Jose metropolitan areas.

Manette Belliveau, executive director of the Visitors and Convention Bureau, said the Monterey Bay has so many attractions that tourists will continue to frequent the area.

"We're fairly confident that it (Pier 39) won't affect us that much," she said.

As the tourism industry awaits the actual impact of Pier 39's Underwater World, another possible threat looms in the distance. In two years, the City of Long Beach also plans to open an aquarium.

Says Carl Anderson, director of public facilities for the City of Monterey: "People are capitalizing on what we have here in Monterey."

Briefly Speaking

Ongoing: Area fire hydrants get tested

THE PEBBLE Beach Community Services District Fire Department, Cypress Fire Protection District and Cal-Am Water Company are conducting fire hydrant water flow tests through April 26 throughout the Pebble Beach and Cypress Fire District areas.

Residents should note that landscaping growing too close to the hydrants may have to be trimmed or removed.

With Cal-Am's assistance, the fire department has tried its utmost to eliminate the possibility of discolored water, but residents should still check their faucets before washing their clothes during this period.

AT THE MOUTH OF CARMEL VALLEY

During "music time" on a typical Monday morning at the school, parents and children joined together in song and pantomime.

"The itty bitsy spider went up the water spout," everyone sang as parents showed their children how to create make-believe spiders with their fingers. "Down came the rain and washed the spider out..."

Two parents held their children in their laps, and everyone laughed when the song was over.

What about the future?

According to critics at the conference, the future of youth in Carmel and throughout the nation depends on how adults and children interact. They agreed that an institution such as Bay School can play an important role in drawing parents and children together, but "partial solutions" will not solve the problem.

"In addition to school and family, children and young people need access to the reality of a lively urban neighborhood in which they can experience useful aspects of social life," Henry Lennard read from the text for the conference.

City charts plans

In terms of making Carmel a more youth-friendly community, Mayor Ken White said the city has plans for developing Forest Hill Park and Rio Park into "low-energy usable areas" for families.

He said he was dedicated to making Carmel "a healthy, clean environment for young people," but "sometimes older adults are not as patient with youth as we should be."

"At Forest Hill, we are discussing developing it with an area for volleyball, barbecue pits, picnic areas and upgraded playground equipment," he said. "It will take about a year or two."

Meanwhile, teens like Remynse, Fair and SanFilippo will continue to frequent the Carmel Youth Center where they can talk about their problems with an adult, eat ice cream, watch movies, play pool or just hang out.

While Nyunt is content with his career, he aspires to be a chief of police or teach at the Police Officers Standards and Training Basic Academy at Monterey Peninsula College.

"Saving someone or resolving a problem is very rewarding," he said.

SPRING BUG CONTROL CAN PUT PETS AT RISK

Springtime is when bugs seem to be at their worst. The SPCA of Monterey County urges pet owners to take precautions when using chemicals to control insects, fleas or ticks. The active ingredients found in many commonly used pesticides and some over the counter flea and tick products include chemicals that can harm your pet if they aren't used strictly according to makers instruction.

Here are common symptoms that indicate your pet may be suffering from chemical poisoning:

- difficulty breathing
- runny eyes
- vomiting
- excessive salivation
- diarrhea
- seizures
- muscle spasms

If your pet shows any of these symptoms, seek immediate veterinary care!

IDENTIFYING THE PROBLEM

Collar, tag or microchip, all pets need IDs

ONE OF the ultimate goals for those who work in animal welfare is mandatory pet identification, whether that means a collar and tag or a microchip.

According to shelter officials, more than 70 percent of pets arriving at shelters have no form of identification to help get them home. Statistically, cats have a much slimmer chance of being reunited with their owners than do dogs.

Roughly 15 percent of all stray dogs are returned to their homes, while the figure for cats is only 1.5 percent. Many cat owners are reluctant to use collars so microchip identification can be an important alternative.

A microchip is about the size and shape of a grain of cooked rice. The information on the chip is stored in a computer database and it can include the owner's name and phone number, an alternate contact, the implanting veterinarian, and information on the animal's medical history and vaccination status.

The chip is inserted between the animal's shoulder blades, just under the skin. The procedure

Doris Day's Best Friends

By DORIS DAY

is no more painful than an injection. A scanner is used to detect the chip and retrieve the valuable identifying information.

Two problems

Now, here are two major problems with microchipping:

■ First, there are three microchip companies that dominate the U.S. pet identification market. All three companies have scanners that can detect the presence of another company's chip, but they can't all read each other's chips!

Developing a "universal" scanner sounds like the perfect solution, but reading someone else's chip can create legal problems. Until these issues are resolved, the situation remains frustrating.

■ Second, scanners have not been perfected.

Their performance varies with some scanning distances as low as one-half inch. That means that a properly chipped animal may go undetected if the scanner isn't held close enough.

Although there are unresolved issues, many experts agree that we will see every pet microchipped in the not-too-distant future. In the meantime, many pet identification ordinances are being passed that give owners a choice of a microchip or a traditional collar with tag.

What does the future hold? Obviously, microchip technology will change and improve. As legal issues are decided, more companies will enter the field and competition will encourage the growth of this exciting technology.

2 recycling plants to help city achieve state mandate

Friday marks opening for Marina facility

By PAUL WOLF

AS WILL all Peninsula cities, Carmel will benefit from the completion this week of two new recycling facilities.

Also this week, the state's Integrated Waste Management Board certified Carmel's projection that it will succeed in "diverting" half of its garbage by the year 2000.

Increased recycling will play a vital role in helping California cities achieve their mandate to cut the waste stream by 50 percent. The cities that do not reach this goal will be subjected to fines.

At the regional dump in Marina stands a new 90,000 square-foot plant that will help sort the large items — construction materials, wood, metal and yard waste. Much of those items currently go in the landfill.

The plant, a full year under construction, goes into operation later this month.

Friday ceremony

The grand opening will be held at 11 a.m. Friday at the Monterey Regional Environmental Park, 14201 Del Monte Boulevard in Marina.

Meanwhile, the Peninsula's private garbage hauler, Carmel Marina Corp., has completed its 32,000 square-foot recycling complex, designed to sort curbside recyclables — plastics, bottles and newspapers. A ribbon-cutting event was held Monday.

The close timing of the two projects is largely coincidental, according to David Myers, general manager of the Monterey Regional Waste Management District.

Nevertheless, because the two facilities specialize in different kinds of recyclables, "they fit hand in glove," he said.

To help it fulfill its state mandate, Carmel is banking on other advances in the recycling front, such as an expansion by Carmel Marina Corp. in the collection of yard waste.

As this industry grows and refines, the real winners will be the lost pets who find their way home thanks to a tiny miracle called the microchip.

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

During World War II more than 12 million Americans left home to serve in the military, and many in civilian life put off marriage. With peace came the Baby Boom. From 1946 to 1964, 76 million babies were born. The first Boomers now are turning 50 -three million of them in 1996. With extended longevity already increasing the number of elderly, the aging of Baby Boomers will greatly affect such spheres as the makeup of the work force, retirement planning, Social Security and Medicare.

Palma serves second notice to CHS (17-2) that MTAL title will be battle to the end

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

MARK APRIL 26 on your calendars — it could very well be the day when the Mission Trail Athletic League varsity baseball title is decided.

On that Friday afternoon, Carmel High will travel to Salinas to play Palma High, a team that has handed the Padres its only two defeats of the season. Palma's most recent conquest of Carmel was a non-league affair — in last week's championship game of the Carmel Classic tournament.

Buoyed by a pair of two-run homers, Palma pulled out a 9-7 victory. In addition to cracking one of those four-baggers, Chieftain senior Justin Lindquist earned the save in spectacular fashion. He set down CHS over the final two innings, recording five strikeouts in the process.

Carmel had gotten off to a good start in the game, thanks to Brian Stream's leadoff home run in the bottom of the first inning.

As it entered Wednesday's game with Pacific Grove, which began after Pine Cone press deadline, the Padres were 17-2 overall and 6-1 in the MTAL. Carmel will be playing Friday — a 4 p.m. game against Gonzales, the MTAL's lone winless team. CHS has handily defeated Gonzales in two prior meetings.

On Wednesday, the Padres play host to Robert Louis Stevenson, with the first pitch set for 4 p.m. Then it's on to the key matchup against Palma, which was 5-1 in the MTAL heading into its game yesterday against Stevenson.

"We have a lot in front of us before we get to the Palma game," Mike Kelly, Carmel High skipper, cautioned. "We have to take it one at a time; we'll worry about Palma later."

LISA FOR THE DEFENSE

Robert Louis Stevenson right fielder Lisa Kroopf (35) is congratulated by her teammates — including grateful pitcher Amy Barker (4) — after making a great defensive play in a recent Mission Trail Athletic League game. The Stevenson girls softball team, coached by Bill Barnes and Sarah Paff, continues league play Friday with a 4 p.m. home game against Pacific Grove. Next week, the Pirates play three MTAL games, including a contest Wednesday at Carmel High against the Padres.

RLS swimmers, divers drown Salinas to make it 4 straight

By JOHN DAVI

UPON THEIR return to school after a long spring break, the Robert Louis Stevenson swimmers and divers wasted no time in overpowering Salinas High, 112-63, on Tuesday afternoon in the Pirates' pool.

Double winners Shea Murphy and Rob Petrie led the Stevenson squad. Murphy, a junior, won the 200 freestyle and 100 breast, while springer Petrie, also a junior, won both the 50 and 100 freestyle events. Senior Mark Guess edged out fellow senior Will Staples to take the diving crown.

■ GOLF

Stevenson upped its league victory total to eight on Tuesday with an easy 196-219 victory over Palma High at Spyglass Hill Golf Course in Pebble Beach.

The sub-200 team score, one of RLS' best efforts this season, featured a one-over-par 37 by senior Darian Shingu, a 38 by Seth Wang and a 39 by Andy Hunter.

Hogan's Alley

By BILL HOGAN

It's a grand OLD game

A GAME called "colf" was first played by the Dutch in 1297 at a four-hole layout in Loenen aan de Vecht. They would place the wood or leather ball on a "toitee" and try to hit the ball in the "put."

If the ball came too close to someone, they would yell "voor." They even had a winter version where the game was played on frozen canals.

A similar game of "golfe" was first played in St. Andrews, Scotland around A.D. 1400. King James II even banned the game in 1457 because he was afraid the pastime would replace bow and arrow practice, which was important to the defense of the kingdom.

However, it took about 400 years for golf to branch out to other countries during the 19th century. In fact, it is pretty easy to determine where classic, old golf courses are located — by taking "The British Colonies Test" (BCT).

In a nutshell, the BCT says that wherever you find the British had a strong influence in the 1800s, you'll also find some golf courses. Historians tell us that the British would move into an area by first building a railroad and then build a course.

In fact, the oldest golf course outside of the United Kingdom is in India, where Royal Calcutta recently celebrated its 165th anniversary!

The oldest club in North America is the Royal Montreal GC, established in 1873. In the United States, the St. Andrews GC in New York (1888) is the oldest, although golf was documented being played as early as 1786 in Charleston, S.C.

In Africa, old golf courses can be found in Cape Town, Harare, Durban, Sierra Leone, Muthiaga, and Bulawayo, to name a few. A golf course in Pau, France dates to 1856. Around the world you'll find old courses in Argentina, Sri Lanka, Pakistan, Brazil, Australia, Chile and more.

More recently, golf has expanded to the far corners of the world and become popular in unlikely places such as Malaysia, Indonesia, Dubai, Finland and Estonia. Heck, if you had the Concorde at your disposal for a day, you could play Beijing GC in the morning and Moscow GC in the evening.

Of course, that would mean bypassing the challenging Katmandu GC.

■ From The Clubhouse: The oldest course on the PGA Tour is Pebble Beach Golf Links, which was first played on Easter Sunday in 1918. However, the course was closed for some minor changes and officially opened on Washington's Birthday in 1919 ... Golf In The Kingdom fans will be glad to know that local author Michael Murphy is working on a new book: The Kingdom of Shivas Irons ... The seventh annual Girl Scouts Golf Tournament will be held at Quail Lodge on Friday, July 12 ($160 — Evelyn Brown, 372-8048) ... Pacific Grove's Mic Falkel recently had a double eagle two on the par-5 ninth hole at Corral de Tierra, a feat rarer than a hole-in-one ... Tee Off for TB Golf Tournament will be held May 25. Candidate says thanks

Dear Editor:

My family and I have a deeply rooted love and concern for Carmel-by-the-Sea. My run for mayor exemplified that.

We are grateful for the freedom we share and value the opportunity to be politically active for the benefit of our neighbors.

We will continue to be vigilant in our observation of the doings at Carmel City Hall and hope you all will do the same in your efforts to be an informed electorate.

I want to thank my family, neighbors, friends and every voter who took the time to listen and participate in my efforts to be of service to all Carmelites.

Thank you.

Frank Perry, Carmel

Ode to Big John

Dear Editor:

While we may live in a small community, we do have some very big people.

The Monterey Peninsula lost a very special man when it lost John Kirchenbauer.

As a young man, Johnny came here from Germany and never looked back. To his new homeland, he always gave of his time and energy.

So large was his heart that on March 30 it ran out of energy. From those who knew Johnny, I believe I share the thought, "drive that mile and serve that dish, Big John."

Mike Brown, Carmel

When the smoke clears, it's not a pretty sight

By CRAIG ARNOTT

NATURALLY, THERE are worse evils in the world than smoking.

And, there are issues infinitely more compelling than the ongoing debate between smokers and non-smokers. The rhetoric long ago became tiresome, fodder for a topic that is unearthed periodically in the news and talk show circuits.

When the World Health Organization recently announced that the annual number of smoking deaths now stands at three million, the statistic may produce a pause but will likely be soon forgotten, wearily categorized with the thousands of pieces of information the public is fed daily. Statistics don't have faces, families or friends.

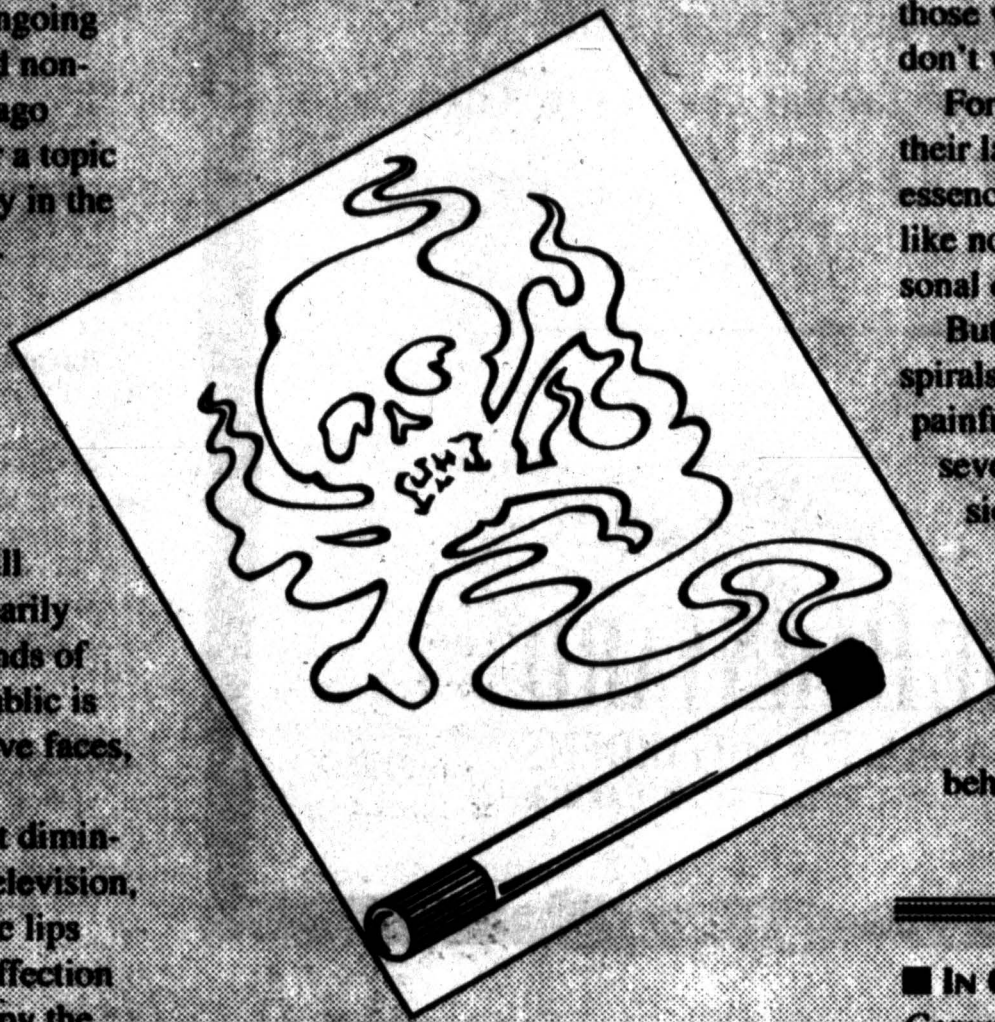

Health warnings have not diminished the lure. In film and television, a cigarette dangling from the lips still spells mystery and disaffection and provokes children to copy the look at school.

The long, soulful drag continues to be equated with sensuality, and the smoky room has become ingrained as an atmospheric staple.

Craig Arnett is a staff writer with The Pine Cone.

What films don't show is the deep, alarming cough, the shortness of breath that impedes walking and the gray, pinched complexions.

Ventilators and respirators don't have the same mystique as an engraved lighter or a pack of Marlboros tucked in the shirt pocket.

When the smoke clears, there are two general camps, each governed by selfish apathy: most people who don't smoke couldn't care less about those who do, and those who do don't want to be bothered about it.

Forgiving these points of view for their lack of consideration, they do in essence seem reasonable. Smoking, like not smoking, is a matter of personal choice.

But when a friend or loved one spirals downward quickly and painfully, or worse, lingers on severely incapacitated, the impression abruptly alters.

In the end, there are two real groups in the smoking issue:

Those who die too soon, and those they leave behind.

Gifted local youth recognized at competition

PENINSULA STAFF REPORT

ON SUNDAY, April 14, the Monterey County Branch of the Music Teachers' Association of California (MTAC) held its 17th Annual Scholarship Auditions for talented young musicians serious about music.

Although these competitive auditions have been held at Sunset Center in Carmel for the past 16 years, rising costs for the use of the facilities in Carmel have forced the Association to seek a new venue for the event. Thus, for the first time, they were held in the auditorium at Canterbury Woods in Pacific Grove.

Although approximately 1,500 young students between the ages of 5 and 18 are studying piano privately in Monterey County, only 39 were sufficiently motivated to prepare a short program from memory to play for the two judges from San Jose State University, Laurel Brettell and Marina Grin, in competition for these annual awards.

In the Junior Division for students below the age of 9, 7-year-old Jennifer Radisch of Salinas, a pupil of Marina teacher Eun-Baek Kwak, was awarded a prize of $50, as was 8-year old Alisa Nikoforov of Monterey, a pupil of Monterey teacher Irene Jossan.

In the Lower Intermediate Division for students between the ages of 9 and 11, there were four $100 cash awards given. The recipients were Bryan Aldape, a resident of Marina and a pupil of Renée Bronson; Joanne Kim, a resident of Monterey and a pupil of Lyn Bronson; Larry Suh, a resident of Monterey and a pupil of Katie Clare Mazzeo; and Brendan Hurt of Pacific Grove, a pupil of Diana Damitz.

In the Upper Intermediate Division for students between the ages of 12 and 14, two students of Lyn Bronson of Carmel — Chris Wade, a resident of Carmel, and Joshua Seedman, a resident of Salinas, won cash prizes of $125 each. In this Division Greg Boger, a resident of Monterey and a pupil of Arline Arrivé, was also awarded $125.

In the Advanced Division for students between the ages of 15 and 18, Jeffrey Parola of Salinas, a pupil of Salinas teacher Martha Holly, was awarded a cash prize of $150, while Jennifer Kim of Marina, a pupil of Renée Bronson, and Emily Aliganga of Salinas, a pupil of Lyn Bronson, won prizes of $75 each.

Special prizes of $25 each were awarded to 8-year-old Grace Kim of Monterey, a student of Renée Bronson; 10-year old Ann Kim of Salinas, a pupil of Eun-Baek Kwak; 14-year old Katya Ravinsky of Pacific Grove, a pupil of Lyn Bronson; 14-year old Greg Boger, of Monterey, a pupil of Arline Arrivé; and 16-year-old Marisa Schwertfeger of Salinas, a pupil of Melinda Coffey.

Canterbury Woods auditorium in Pacific Grove was the setting for the 17th Annual Scholarship Auditions sponsored by the Monterey County Branch of the Music Teachers' Association of California (MTAC).

SOCIAL EVENTS

What a 'garden' spot! Artie's home was ideal site for tea

ARTIE EARLY is going to have to move out of her lovely home and allow the books to move in.

Social Spotlight

By Dodie Barkley

At the tea Early held April 10 in her home for the Historic Garden League of Monterey, which honored two visiting authors who lectured and helped make this past weekend's Pebble Beach Garden Show such a success, tons of books were neatly stacked about the rooms. I counted almost 35 books on gardens alone, which made Early's home a perfect setting for what was a delightful tea.

Diane Dorrans Saeks, contributing editor at Garden Design magazine and also the creative advisor to the Garden Show, spoke about the fantastic work the Historic Garden League was contributing to the three-day event, which began Friday at The Lodge at Pebble Beach.

James J. Yoch, author of Landscaping the American Dream: The Gardens and Film Sets of Florence Yoch, spoke about his relationship to Florence (he's her cousin). In addition, he exhibited his fascinating book, which depicts the many movie garden sets Florence Yoch created, including one for Gone With the Wind.

Historic League Chairman Carvel van der Burch gave Early an unusual metallic birdcage to thank her for the tea and discussed the gardens that the League would be hosting at the show, which was expected to attract some 10,000 visitors.

Artie Early's beautiful home was the perfect setting for a special tea prior to this past weekend's Pebble Beach Garden Show. Here, Early enjoys a light moment with Diane Dorrans Saeks, contributing editor at Garden Design magazine; Carvel van der Burch, Historic Garden League chairman; and James J. Yoch, author.

■ Eden revisited at Pebble Beach Garden Show

When Adam was told to name all the animals in the world, it was probably a good thing God didn't ask him to name all the flora as well — we would still be waiting for the Garden of Eden to open.

At the Pebble Beach Garden Show, there also was a Garden of Eden and a plant list that would have given poor Adam writer's cramp. Among them were: Photinia Fraseri, Prunus Bliresiana, Festuca Ovina, Glaucia and Dodonaea Vicosa 'Purpurea', and, oh yes, a luscious strawberry bush!

Garden lovers arrived near the third green at Pebble Beach Golf Links to take bus tours to the various private gardens or peruse the nearby exhibit tents that were filled with beautiful flower exhibits.

Behind this year's Garden Party success is Garden Design magazine, whose pages are dedicated to landscape designers looking for innovation and inspiration.

■ Everyone's a winner

Ron Weitzman and Morley Brown, committee members of Friends of the Salvation Army, hosted a celebratory evening Friday, April 12, opening night of Pacific Repertory Theatre's production of Stephen Sondheim's A Little Night Music. The benefit for the Salvation Army was held at the Golden Bough Playhouse in Carmel.

This flower exhibit, designed by Jim Bovenzi and Ron Cirillo of Design One Environments Florists of Seaside, used every color imaginable to cop the top award in the PB Garden Show.

The hors d'oeuvres brought in by Brown and Weitzman furnished a delectable beginning to a thought-provoking evening. And wait until you see their new curtain — it adds a great deal of dignity to the Golden Bough!

The great turnout included Monterey Mayor Dan Albert and his wife Joanne.

And what a coup for the Salvation Army, whose uniformed, smiling officers were there as ushers, handing out the programs.

Brown and Weitzman, take a bow!

■ Shakin' the dice with the Jesters!

Hoping to roll a seven or an 11, gamblers threw the dice in wild abandon at the Jesters' Great Gambol, a benefit for the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art that was held last Saturday at The Elks Club in Monterey.

The weather cooperated in grand style over the weekend as the Pebble Beach Garden Show was enjoyed by thousands of guests.

Besides shaking the dice, Lucille Huntington led a host of ladies dressed in flapper outfits in shaking their tassels in a short act to the song "Sweet Georgia Brown." The show ended in a fractured finale with Lucille held high in the arms of professional dancers Vince Morales and Frank Quilantang of the DiFranco Dancers. What a fun-loving group the gals and guys were!

Spotted among the gaming tables were Steve Gunia, looking like Dirty Dan McGrew, and his beautiful wife Dolores, who wore a gold lamé flapper outfit with boa. June LaMantia, wearing a blue-tasseled outfit, threw her boa around like a fetching flapper as she tried to knock coins out of the one-arm bandits.

Joe LaMantia, meanwhile, wore a gambling tie, acting as croupier at one of the 21 tables. Phyllice Dennis, Polly Kenaston, and Al and Von Rilling were standouts in their '20s costumes. It was a wonderfully rowdy crowd that showed up to help the Jesters — the fund-raising arm of the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art.

Silent auction packages included food baskets, overnight stays at various inns, golf packages, and a cioppino dinner for eight to be cooked by June LaMantia at the Gunia home. Guests were busy signing up.

All of the tokens earned by the gamblers were turned Bottoms arranged for the Weston photographs, which are part of the library's archives, to be exhibited at Highlands Inn.

Society hopes play will teach audiences about Welsh culture also includes accomplished formal elegies and eulogies, love poetry and religious poetry, "all presented with humor and compassion."

Copies of a book of poems used in the show will also be available at the auditorium.

Old language

Presenting the work of a poet who wrote 700 years ago to a contemporary audience "is a great idea to spread Welsh culture," said Eileen Thompson, publicity director for the Welsh Society. "Welsh is one of the oldest languages in Europe. And some people don't even know where Wales is." (The play, she explains quickly, is in English.)

Thompson, who is of Welsh descent, founded the Society in 1992, and the group has since grown to more than 90 members.

"We're delighted that people will have this chance to see the depth of the culture in Wales," Thompson said of the production.

According to Thompson, membership in the Society is not restricted to those of Welsh descent, but is open to anyone who wants to learn more about the Celtic language, history, legacies and legends that are the foundation of Welsh culture.

REAL ESTATE

Move-up housing market poised for rebound

THE REAL estate industry and the stock market are often in a tussle to grab investment dollars from middle- and upper-class families.

So it was with glee that Wall Street analysts recently reported that overall stock market equity in the country has surpassed the total value of home investments.

But that could change as move-up home buyers begin to use their recent stock gains to buy more expensive and roomier houses.

The soaring value of tech stocks, mutual funds and other Wall Street investments combined with other demographic and economic factors could begin to improve the outlook for the long dormant California trade-up home buyer and give a big boost to construction, home sales and the overall real estate market in the state.

These enormous stock gains can easily be converted into money for a house down payment. And though home buyers can't use retirement funds for buying a house without facing stiff tax penalties, lenders consider these investments favorably when qualifying a home buyer.

"If you got your toe in the stock market, even with your IRA or 401k, your balance sheet has improved, giving you some financial clout to buy that bigger house that you put off for the last five years," said Stan Ross, managing partner of the E&Y Kenneth Leventhal Real Estate Group.

Other factors are improving the prospects for a rebound in the move-up market. The most

Update

"Tis the Season"...to Buy a Home

Spring traditionally marks the beginning of home buying season and it looks as if 1996 will be an active year for real estate sales in Monterey County.

Real estate and mortgage experts nationwide indicate that this is a great time to buy a home! The economy is improving and interest rates, although rising somewhat, are still quite low.

If you've found that the slightly higher interest rates have decreased the mortgage amount for which you can qualify, try a newer, more creative approach with a loan program tailored to your specific needs. For instance, you might be interested in a fixed rate loan where the interest rate and payment start low (under 6%) and increase gradually over the first several years — thereby allowing you to enjoy more home while your income increases. This could lower your monthly payment several hundred dollars a month in the first year of your mortgage!

important is a more stable employment picture in California.

Non-farm employment jumped by 340,000 jobs in the last year, according to the California Department of Finance. Even manufacturing, which has declined nationally in the last several months, added 28,000 jobs in the first three months of 1996.

Housing market conditions also are favorable. The move-up house is less expensive today because home prices have come so far down. A move-up house in the late 1980s that sold for $400,000 could be $325,000 or lower in some markets today. Plus, interest rates have fallen from an average of 10 percent or so in the late 1980s to 8 percent today.

Stalling the market the last several years were prospective move-up buyers who were locked into their homes because they lost so much value in their houses.

"The only way to buy up for many homeowners was to write a check to pay off the old house because the mortgage was lower than the sales price," said John Karevoll, analyst with Dataquick Information Systems in La Jolla. "Of course, very few people could afford to do that."

Road to a new house
Today, values have firmed up and some markets are even experiencing inflation, which is the road to equity and to a new house.

Increases in home prices signal better investment opportunities, and trade-up buyers typically respond favorably to improved investment conditions in the housing market, said G.U. Krueger, economist with the California Association of Realtors.

As the economy improves, the most important trend is "a pipeline of first time homeowners who bought three and four years ago and are itching to move up," said Karevoll. "That pipeline has been frozen for several years, but it is beginning to thaw."

Krueger is more guarded in his optimism about the strength of the trade-up housing market.

"The housing market can — at best — be characterized as being in transition," Krueger said. "Generally, first-time home buyers still dominate the housing market, but there is evidence that the repeat buyer market could gain momentum in the months ahead."

Wildflowers on show at P.G. Museum of Natural History

THE 35TH Annual Wildflower Show, spotlighting more than 600 species and varieties of Monterey County native plants, will be held Friday through Sunday, April 19-21, at the Pacific Grove Museum of Natural History, Central and Forest avenues, Pacific Grove.

The plants on display have been cataloged by members of the local California Native Plant Society. Specimens are collected just days before the exhibit.

An additional highlight of this year's show are photographs of the historic Monterey Cooper-Molera Adobe gardens, from the collection of local educator Marcia DeVoe. The photographs will be displayed at the museum through May 31.

Admission is $1. More information: 648-3116.

March of Dimes WalkAmerica scheduled April 27-28

ON SATURDAY and Sunday, April 27 and 28, walkers across the country will participate in the 26th annual March of Dimes WalkAmerica.

Kmart and Salinas radio station KOCN-FM have joined forces to support WalkAmerica with a "Walk for Someone You Love" event at local Kmart stores.

Those shopping at Kmart this month can purchase a paper sneaker for $1, sign it, and Kmart will in turn display it as support for WalkAmerica.

All the money raised from this promotion will go to the March of Dimes, which aims to prevent birth defects.
